E&ENews PM -- Thu., January 10, 2013 -- Read the full edition

1. HYDRAULIC FRACTURING: EPA delaying Pavillion case for 8 months

U.S. EPA is delaying its work on the Pavillion, Wyo., water pollution case by more than eight months, angering both sides in the bitter debate about whether drilling and hydraulic fracturing contaminated drinking water in the area. Neither the people who say their water is contaminated nor the company involved, Encana Corp., wanted the delay. Representatives of both sides today criticized the decision.
